

Program Introduction

NAMI Provider is a staff development program for health care organizations working directly with people affected by mental illness. This evidence-based experience equips health care staff with a deeper understanding of mental illness and the confidence to serve people and families in a collaborative manner.

The program's three instructors have direct experience with mental illness:

1

An person living well in mental illness recovery

2

A family member of someone with mental illness

3

A mental health professional with personal experience with mental illness

Why it Matters

- Mental illness touches almost everyone's life in some way.
- More than one in five U.S. adults live with a mental illness.*
- 43.8 million adults experience mental illness in a given year.
- People living with mental illness have historically been negatively affected by stigma and bias in the health care system in the U.S. For many of those people, interactions with health care providers can be a negative — or even traumatic — experience.*
- Provider bias, both conscious and unconscious, and a lack of empathy can result in misdiagnosis and inadequate treatment.* This can lead to mistrust of health care professionals and ultimately result in people choosing to forego accessing care altogether.*
- As the family unit plays a critical role for people with mental illness, it is important for health care providers to positively engage with not only the person with mental illness but also their family in various ways.*
- Providers' interactions with people can either exacerbate or alleviate existing internalized stigma.*

What Makes NAMI Provider Unique?

- Lived experience of mental illness paired with an evidence-based curriculum
- A combination of the recovery and medical models for empathetic, compassionate mental illness treatment
- Deeper insights into person and family perspectives
- A challenge for participants to reexamine how they think about mental illness

Participant Perspectives

- Improved attitudes, beliefs and behavior toward working with people and families experiencing mental illness*
- Less anxiety and increased confidence
