Are there any online resources for therapy/support groups or mental health apps?

13 days ago - Updated

Online therapy is becoming increasingly popular as an affordable alternative to treatment - providing options that range from online chats with actual therapists and/or "bots", to free downloadable tools and worksheets and mental health apps. As a result of the novel Coronavirus, the use of social distancing to "flatten the curve" has catapulted the use of telehealth, including telemental health. Most providers now offer services via phone call or online. Additionally, many in-person support groups now offer online or phone conference call virtual support. Additionally, peer-led, online support and discussion groups offer an accessible option to those for whom interaction through digital media is a preferred alternative to in-person support groups. Online counseling provides convenience and accessibility that in-person therapy may not be able to provide. Similar to seeking an in-person therapist, it can take some trial-and-error to find the right one.
